

Canadian Rural Health Research Society

Mission & Goals

Mission

- To facilitate research and knowledge translation aimed at understanding and promoting the health of people living in rural and remote Canada

Goals

- To build inter-disciplinary, multi-disciplinary, mutually supportive and community-focused research networks concerned with rural and remote health
- To develop health research that is responsive to the needs of people living in rural and remote communities

President's Message

To achieve our goals as an organization we need to connect with other individuals involved in rural health across Canada and in other countries around the globe. Capacity building will also be a major emphasis as we prepare the next generation of rural health researchers. Finally, we need to continually determine and implement ways through which we can successfully work with rural communities to generate their input and ideas about what really matters to them. To do this, we need to always ask so what, what for, and what will we do when we find out the information?

There are many rewards when we work with rural communities whether we do so as researchers, practitioners or community members. We make new friends, visit interesting places and see the world through a different set of glasses.
